1 TO THE PARTIES AND THEIR ATTORNEYS OF RECORD:

2 PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on July 2, 2009, at 10:00 a.m., or as soon thereafter as the 3 matter may be heard, before the Honorable Vaughn R. Walker, United States District Court, 4 Northern District of California, 450 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, California, Proposed 5 Intervenors Dennis Hollingsworth, Gail J. Knight, Martin F. Gutierrez, Hak-Shing William Tam, 6 Mark A. Jansson, and ProtectMarriage.com – Yes on 8, a Project of California Renewal, 7 (collectively referred to as “Proposed Intervenors”) will move this Court for an order allowing them 8 to intervene in this case.

9 Proposed Intervenors respectfully request an order allowing them to intervene in this case to 10 guard their significant protectable interest in the subject matter of this lawsuit.

11 INTRODUCTION

12 The Ninth Circuit has repeatedly permitted sponsors and supporters of ballot initiatives and 13 constitutional amendments to intervene in lawsuits challenging those provisions. Proposed 14 Intervenors are the official proponents and campaign committee for Proposition 8, the California 15 constitutional provisions challenged in this lawsuit. This Court should thus allow them to intervene 16 in this case.

17 PROCEDURAL HISTORY

18 On May 22, 2009, Plaintiffs filed this suit, asserting claims against various California state 19 and local officials. Plaintiffs allege that California’s recently enacted Proposition 8, which is now 20 embodied in Article I, Section 7.5 of the State Constitution, violates the Due Process and Equal 21 Protection Clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution. They seek 22 declaratory and injunctive relief against the enforcement of Article I, Section 7.5 of the State 23 Constitution.

24 A few days after the initial filing of this lawsuit, on May 27, 2009, Plaintiffs filed a motion 25 for preliminary injunction, asking this Court to enjoin California state officials from enforcing 26 Article I, Section 7.5 of the State Constitution. Plaintiffs set their preliminary-injunction hearing 27 for July 2, 2009.

1 Now Proposed Intervenors respectfully request that this Court allow them to intervene.
2 They have expeditiously filed this intervention motion so as not to cause any unnecessary delay in 3 these proceedings. And, to aid this Court in economically addressing the preliminary issues raised 4 in this case, Proposed Intervenors have proposed to schedule their intervention hearing for the same 5 time as Plaintiffs' preliminary-injunction hearing.

6 FACTUAL HISTORY

7 Article II, Section 8 of the California Constitution gives "electors" the right "to propose 8 statutes and amendments to the [State] Constitution" through the initiative process. See Cal. Const.
9 art. II, § 8. Five California "electors"—Dennis Hollingsworth, Gail J. Knight, Martin F. Gutierrez, 10 Hak-Shing William Tam, and Mark A. Jansson (collectively referred to as "Proponents")— 11 exercised this state constitutional right by taking the necessary legal steps to become the "Official 12 Proponents" of Proposition 8.

13 In the fall of 2007, Proponents started the process of satisfying all legal requirements for 14 placing Proposition 8 on the November 2008 ballot. Proponents began by supervising the drafting 15 and ultimately approving the language of Proposition 8. Declaration of Dennis Hollingsworth at ¶ 6 16 (attached as Exhibit A); Declaration of Gail J. Knight at ¶ 6 (attached as Exhibit B); Declaration of 17 Martin F. Gutierrez at ¶ 6 (attached as Exhibit C); Declaration of Hak-Shing William Tam at ¶ 6 18 (attached as Exhibit D); Declaration of Mark A. Jansson at ¶ 6 (attached as Exhibit E). Proponents 19 then submitted the requisite legal forms prompting the California Attorney General to prepare 20 Proposition 8's "Title and Summary" for the signature petitions. Id. By approving the language 21 and submitting the forms, Proponents became the "Official Proponents" of Proposition 8 within the 22 meaning of California law. See Cal. Elec. Code § 342. As such, Proponents assumed various legal 23 duties and acquired numerous legal rights: among other things, they were responsible for paying 24 the initiative filing fee; they could compel the California Attorney General to draft a Title and 25 Summary for the initiative; and they were the only persons authorized to submit amendments to the 26 initiative. See Cal. Elec. Code § 9004.

27 On November 29, 2007, the California Attorney General issued to Proponents a 1 “circulating” Title and Summary for Proposition 8. Ex. A at ¶ 10; Ex. B at ¶ 10; Ex. C at ¶ 10; Ex.

2 D at ¶ 10; Ex. E at ¶ 10. But before they could collect signatures, Proponents needed to comply 3 with additional legal requirements. For instance, they needed to prepare petition forms that 4 complied with the California Elections Code. See Cal. Elec. Code §§ 9001, 9008, 9012, 9014.
5 Proponents were also required to retain an executed certification from each supervising signature-6 gatherer, certifying that he or she would not allow the Proposition 8 signatures to be used for any 7 purpose other than qualifying the measure for the ballot. See Cal. Elec. Code § 9609. And 8 Proponents had a legal duty to instruct all signature-collectors about the petition-circulation and 9 signature-gathering requirements under state law. See Cal. Elec. Code § 9607. No person or entity 10 other than Proponents could submit petitions to the State for signature verification; the State would 11 have summarily rejected petitions submitted by others. See Cal. Elec. Code § 9032.

12 California law places onerous, time-constrained signature-gathering requirements on 13 Proponents. They were responsible for obtaining at least 694,354 valid petition signatures between 14 November 29, 2007, and April 28, 2008. Ex. A at ¶ 16; Ex. B at ¶ 16; Ex. C at ¶ 16; Ex. D at ¶ 16;
15 Ex. E at ¶ 16. In other words, Proponents needed to supervise the collection of, on average, at least 16 4,629 valid petition signatures per day during a five-month period.

17 Even after a sufficient number of signatures had been collected, Proponents retained the 18 exclusive statutory right to decide whether to file the initiative petitions for signature verification.
19 See Cal. Elec. Code § 9032 (“The right to file the petition shall be reserved to its proponents, and 20 any section thereof presented for filing by any person or persons other than the proponents . . . shall 21 be disregarded by the elections official”). No person other than Proponents possessed this unique 22 legal right.

23 Near the beginning of this initiative process, Proponents helped to establish 24 ProtectMarriage.com – Yes on 8, a Project of California Renewal (“Committee”), as a “primarily 25 formed ballot measure committee” under the California Political Reform Act. Ex. A at ¶ 13; Ex. B 26 at ¶ 13; Ex. C at ¶ 13; Ex. D at ¶ 13; Ex. E at ¶ 13. The Committee exists with one purpose: to 27 support Proposition 8. See Declaration of David Bauer at ¶ 4 (attached as Exhibit F). Proponents 28

1 endorsed the Committee as the official Proposition 8 campaign committee, and designated it to 2 receive all contributions and disburse all expenditures for the Proposition 8 campaign. Id. at ¶ 6.

3 Since its formation, the Committee has received financial contributions from over 83,000 4 individuals, the vast majority of which are registered California voters. Id. at ¶ 8. From these 5 financial supporters, the Committee has amassed more than $39 million in total contributions. Id. at 6 ¶ 9. Aside from the statutory powers and duties reserved exclusively to Proponents, the Committee 7 was directly responsible for all aspects of the campaign to qualify Proposition 8 for the ballot and 8 enact it into law. Id. at ¶¶ 6, 10. During the campaign, the Committee spent over $37 million to 9 qualify Proposition 8 for the ballot and operate a statewide campaign to persuade a majority of 10 California voters to approve it. Id. at ¶ 11. The Committee’s substantial investments of time and 11 money, in addition to its unique status as a “primarily formed ballot measure committee” under 12 state law, distinguish its interest in Proposition 8 from that of other supporters in the general public.
13 Id. at ¶ 15.

14 On April 24, 2008, Proponents authorized the Committee to submit the petitions, containing 15 the signatures of over 1.2 million Californians, for signature verification by county-elections
16 officials. Ex. A at ¶ 19; Ex. B at ¶ 19; Ex. C at ¶ 19; Ex. D at ¶ 19; Ex. E at ¶ 19. California law 17 provides that county-elections officials and the Secretary of State must provide certain notices to 18 Proponents during the signature-verification process. See Cal. Elec. Code §§ 9030, 9031, 9033. On 19 June 2, 2008, the California Secretary of State notified Proponents that the county-elections
20 officials had verified the requisite number of voter signatures and that, consequently, Proposition 8 21 qualified for inclusion on the November 2008 ballot. Ex. A at ¶ 21; Ex. B at ¶ 21; Ex. C at ¶ 21;
22 Ex. D at ¶ 21; Ex. E at ¶ 21.

23 After Proposition 8 was approved for the ballot, Proponents had the statutory authority to 24 designate the arguments in favor of Proposition 8 to appear in the statewide voter-guide. Ex. A at ¶ 25 22; Ex. B at ¶ 22; Ex. C at ¶ 22; Ex. D at ¶ 22; Ex. E at ¶ 22. The voter-guide contains only one 26 argument in favor of each ballot initiative. See Cal. Elec. Code § 9067. If multiple arguments are 27 submitted, the Secretary of State publishes only the argument designated by Proponents and omits 28

1 those submitted by other persons or entities. See Cal. Elec. Code § 9067(b). Thus, California law
2 gives Proponents a preferred status as official advocate for Proposition 8.

3 In addition to satisfying their many legal duties, Proponents dedicated substantial time, 4 effort, reputation, and personal resources in campaigning for Proposition 8. Ex. A at ¶ 27; Ex. B at 5 ¶ 27; Ex. D at ¶ 27; Ex. E at ¶ 27. Mr. Hollingsworth, for example, authored campaign literature 6 and helped to raise more than $2 million for the campaign. Ex. A at ¶ 27. Mr. Tam spent most of 7 his working hours during 2008 advocating for Proposition 8; among other things, he coordinated 8 Proposition 8 rallies and organized volunteers from the Asian-American community. Ex. D at ¶ 27.
9 Mrs. Knight donated personal funds to the campaign and gave a presentation at a large Proposition 10 8 rally. Ex. B at ¶ 27. And Mr. Jansson spent hundreds of hours working in support of Proposition 11 8—work which included circulating signature petitions, organizing volunteers, speaking to 12 community organizations, and serving on the Committee. Ex. E at ¶ 27. Proponents’ tireless 13 support of Proposition 8, and unique status as official proponents, separates their interest in 14 Proposition 8 from that of other supporters in the general public. Ex. A at ¶ 5; Ex. B at ¶ 5; Ex. C at 15 ¶ 5; Ex. D at ¶ 5; Ex. E at ¶ 5.

16 In late June 2008, Proponents were sued as Real Parties in Interest in a pre-election legal 17 challenge to Proposition 8 filed in the California Supreme Court. See Petition for Extraordinary 18 Relief, Bennett v. Bowen, No. S164520 (attached as Exhibit G). The petitioners in that case alleged 19 that Proposition 8 was a constitutional “revision” (rather than an “amendment”), and thus could not 20 be enacted through the initiative process. Id. at p. 12. The petitioners also asserted that the Title 21 and Summary on the circulated petitions were false and misleading. Id. at p. 34. Proponents 22 defended against those allegations, and the California Supreme Court summarily denied that legal 23 challenge. See Bennett v. Bowen, No. S164520 (Cal. July 16, 2008) (attached as Exhibit H).

24 On November 4, 2008, a majority of California voters approved Proposition 8 as an 25 amendment to the State Constitution. Thus, on November 5, 2008, Proposition 8 became Article I, 26 Section 7.5 of the California Constitution, which states: “Only marriage between a man and a 27 woman is valid or recognized in California.” Cal. Const. art. I, § 7.5.

1 On that same day, November 5, 2008, three post-election lawsuits were filed in the 2 California Supreme Court, arguing that Proposition 8 was enacted in violation of the State
 3 Constitution. See Amended Petition for Extraordinary Relief, Strauss v. Horton, No. S168047
 4 (attached as Exhibit I). Although not initially named as parties, Proponents and the Committee
 5 successfully intervened in that suit and defended Proposition 8. See Strauss v. Horton, No.
 6 S168047 (Cal. Nov. 19, 2008) (attached as Exhibit J). In that litigation, the California Attorney
 7 General opposed Proposition 8, arguing that it “should be invalidated . . . because it abrogates 8 fundamental rights . . . without a compelling interest.” See Answer Brief in Response to Petition 9 for Extraordinary Relief, Strauss v. Horton, No. S168047, at p. 75 (attached as Exhibit K). On May 10 26, 2009, the California Supreme Court denied those legal challenges and upheld Proposition 8.
 11 See Strauss v. Horton, Nos. S168047, S168066, S168078, 2009 WL 1444594 (Cal. May 26, 2009).

12 On May 6, 2009, Proponents and the Committee successfully intervened in another 13 challenge to Proposition 8 currently pending before the United States District Court for the Central 14 District of California. See Smelt v. United States, Case No. SACV-09-286 DOC (MLGx) (C.D.
 15 Cal. May 6, 2009) (attached as Exhibit L); see also Ex. A at ¶ 30; Ex. B at ¶ 30; Ex. C at ¶ 29; Ex.
 16 D at ¶ 30; Ex. E at ¶ 30; Ex. F. at ¶ 19. That case, like this one, challenges the legality of 17 Proposition 8 under the United States Constitution. Proponents and the Committee through their 18 legal counsel are currently defending against that federal constitutional challenge to Proposition 8.

19 Proponents believe that no other party in this case will adequately represent their interests as 20 official proponents with state constitutional and statutory rights to propose Proposition 8. Ex. A at 21 ¶ 29; Ex. B at ¶ 29; Ex. C at ¶ 28; Ex. D at ¶ 29; Ex. E at ¶ 29. The Committee likewise believes 22 that no other party will adequately represent its interests as the official Proposition 8 campaign 23 committee. Ex. F at ¶ 18.

24 ARGUMENT

25 I. PROPOSED INTERVENORS ARE ENTITLED TO INTERVENE AS OF RIGHT.

26 Four requirements must be satisfied to intervene as a matter of right under Fed. R. Civ. P.
 27 24(a)(2): (1) the intervention motion must be timely filed; (2) the applicant must have a 28

1 “significantly protectable” interest relating to the subject of the action; (3) the disposition of the 2 action might, as a practical matter, impair the applicant’s ability to protect its interest; and (4) the 3 applicant’s interest might be inadequately represented by the existing parties. Sw. Ctr. for 4 Biological Diversity v. Berg, 268 F.3d 810, 817-18 (9th Cir. 2001) (citing Nw. Forest Res. Council 5 v. Glickman, 82 F.3d 825, 836 (9th Cir. 1996)). Each of these requirements must be evaluated 6 liberally in favor of intervention:

7 A liberal policy in favor of intervention serves both efficient resolution of issues and 8 broadened access to the courts. By allowing parties with a practical interest in the 9 outcome of a particular case to intervene, [the court] often prevent[s] or simplif[ies] 10 future litigation involving related issues; at the same time, [the court] allow[s] an additional interested party to express its views . . . .

11 United States v. City of Los Angeles, 288 F.3d 391, 398 (9th Cir. 2002) (citing Forest Conservation 12 Council v U.S. Forest, 66 F.3d 1489, 496 n.8 (9th Cir. 1995)); see also Berg, 268 F.3d at 818; 13 Washington State Bldg. & Constr. Trades Council v. Spellman, 684 F.2d 627, 630 (9th Cir. 1982).
 14 Proposed Intervenors satisfy all four intervention requirements, each of which will be addressed in 15 turn.

16 A. Proposed Intervenors Have Timely Filed This Motion.

17 Three criteria determine whether a motion to intervene satisfies the timeliness requirement:
 18 (1) the stage of the proceedings; (2) the reason for delay, if any, in moving to intervene; and (3) 19 prejudice to the parties. Glickman, 82 F.3d at 836-837. Proposed Intervenors filed their motion at 20 the very earliest stages of this proceeding (less than a week after these proceedings began); they 21 have not delayed in moving to intervene; and the parties will not be prejudiced in any way.

22 B. Proposed Intervenors Have A Significantly Protectable Interest In The Subject
 23 Matter Of This Lawsuit.

24 The Ninth Circuit has adopted “a virtual per se rule that the sponsors of a ballot initiative 25 have a sufficient interest in the subject matter of the litigation to intervene pursuant to Fed. R. Civ.
 26 P. 24(a).” Yniguez v. State of Arizona, 939 F.2d 727, 735 (9th Cir. 1991); see also Prete v.
 27 Bradbury, 438 F.3d 949, 954 (9th Cir. 2006) (ruling that a public-interest group and chief petitioner

1 who supported “an initiative [had] a ‘significant protectable interest’ in defending the legality of the 2 measure”); Spellman, 684 F.2d at 630 (holding that “the public interest group that sponsored the 3 [challenged] initiative[] was entitled to intervention as a matter of right under Rule 24(a)”). “The 4 individualized interest of official proponents of ballot initiatives in defending the validity of the 5 enactment they sponsored is sufficient to support intervention as of right.” Bates v. Jones, 904 F.
6 Supp. 1080, 1086 (N.D. Cal. 1995).

7 A long line of Ninth Circuit precedent supports intervention by initiative proponents, 8 initiative sponsors, and constitutional-amendment supporters. In Yniguez, the Ninth Circuit held 9 that an organization and spokesman who campaigned for a ballot initiative had “sufficient 10 interest[s] in the subject matter of the litigation to intervene” in a suit challenging that initiative.
11 Yniguez, 939 F.2d at 735. In Prete, the court ruled that the chief initiative petitioner and a public-12 interest group that supported the initiative had “a ‘significant protectable interest’ in defending the 13 legality of the measure.” Prete, 438 F.3d at 954. Similarly, in Spellman, the court found that “the 14 public interest group that sponsored the [challenged] initiative[] was entitled to intervention as a 15 matter of right under Rule 24(a).” Spellman, 684 F.2d at 630. And, in Idaho v. Freeman, 625 F.2d 16 886, 887 (9th Cir. 1980), the Ninth Circuit concluded that an organization had the right to intervene 17 in a suit challenging the ratification procedures for a constitutional amendment supported by that 18 organization. Likewise, in Sagebrush Rebellion, Inc. v. Watt, 713 F.2d 525, 528 (9th Cir. 1983), a 19 case challenging the federal government’s creation of a wildlife conservation area, the court held 20 that “there [could] be no serious dispute . . . concerning . . . the existence of a protectable interest” 21 on the part of an organization that supported the conservation area’s creation. This Court has 22 dutifully followed this guidance: in Bates, for example, this Court permitted intervention by the 23 “official proponents” of a state constitutional amendment setting term limits for state legislators.
24 Bates, 904 F. Supp. at 1086.

25 Here, Proposed Intervenors are the official proponents and campaign committee of 26 Proposition 8, and as such, they hold unique legal statuses regarding that initiative. By creating, 27 proposing, and campaigning for Proposition 8, Proponents have exclusively exercised many state 28

1 statutory and constitutional rights: (1) the constitutional right to propose Proposition 8 by initiative, 2 see Cal. Const. art. II, § 8; (2) the statutory right to submit completed signature petitions, thereby 3 authorizing the State to place Proposition 8 on the ballot, see Cal. Elec. Code § 9032; and (3) the 4 statutory right to designate arguments in support of Proposition 8 for the official voter-guide, see
5 Cal. Elec. Code § 9067. Cf. Yniguez, 939 F.2d at 733 (“[State] law recognizes the ballot initiative 6 sponsor’s heightened interest in the measure by giving the sponsor official rights and duties distinct 7 from those of the voters at large”). Similarly, the Committee holds a distinctive legal position: it is 8 the only “primarily formed ballot measure committee” under California law endorsed by 9 Proponents in support of Proposition 8. In short, Proposed Intervenors’ unique legal statuses 10 regarding Proposition 8 are unmatched by any other person or organization.

11 Proposed Intervenors have indefatigably labored in support of Proposition 8. Proponents 12 complied with a myriad of legal requirements to procure Proposition 8’s enactment, such as (1) 13 filing forms prompting the State to prepare Proposition 8’s Title and Summary, (2) paying the 14 initiative filing fee, (3) drafting legally compliant signature petitions, (4) overseeing the collection 15 of more than 1.2 million signatures, (5) instructing signature-collectors on state-law guidelines, and 16 (6) obtaining certifications from supervising signature-gatherers. Proponents devoted substantial 17 time, effort, and resources through fundraising, campaigning, monetary donations, organizing 18 volunteers, and assisting the Committee. Likewise, the Committee—which was responsible for all 19 aspects of the campaign (aside from those legal duties assigned exclusively to Proponents)— 20 labored incessantly, collecting and disbursing approximately $39 million, all with the goal of 21 achieving Proposition 8’s enactment. Proposed Intervenors have also battled for Proposition 8 in 22 the courtroom: Proponents successfully defended against a pre-election legal challenge; and 23 Proponents as well as the Committee intervened and successfully defended against a post-election 24 challenge filed in the California Supreme Court. See Strauss v. Horton, Nos. S168047, S168066, 25 S168078, 2009 WL 1444594 (Cal. May 26, 2009). Currently, Proposed Intervenors continue their 26 legal defense of Proposition 8. They have recently intervened and are litigating in a federal-court 27 suit, which, like this case, challenges the legality of Proposition 8 under the United States

1 Constitution. See Smelt v. United States, Case No. SACV-09-286 DOC (MLGx) (C.D. Cal.). It is 2 thus clear that Proposed Intervenors—unlike any other person or organization—have invested 3 greatly in enacting and protecting Proposition 8.

4 In this case, Plaintiffs directly challenge Proposition 8 under the Federal Constitution. It is 5 well settled under Ninth Circuit precedent that Proposed Intervenors’ unique legal status as 6 Proposition 8’s official proponents and campaign committee endow them with a significantly 7 protectable interest permitting them to intervene as of right. See Yniguez, 939 F.2d at 735; Prete, 8 438 F.3d at 954; Spellman, 684 F.2d at 630; Bates, 904 F. Supp. at 1086. Ninth Circuit precedent 9 also demonstrates that Proposed Intervenors’ tireless support of Proposition 8 also establishes their 10 right to intervene. See Sagebrush Rebellion, 713 F.2d at 528; Freeman, 625 F.2d at 887.

11 C. This Court’s Ruling Might Impair Proposed Intervenors’ Significantly 12 Protectable Interest.

13 When a proposed intervenor “would be substantially affected in a practical manner by the 14 determination made in the action, he should, as a general rule, be entitled to intervene.” Berg, 268 15 F.3d at 822 (quoting the advisory committee’s notes from Fed. R. Civ. P. 24). Not surprisingly, the 16 Ninth Circuit has routinely concluded that an initiative- or amendment-supporters’ sufficiently 17 protectable interest could be impaired by a suit challenging the supported provision. See Prete, 438 18 F.3d at 954 (“[A]n adverse court decision on such [an initiative] measure may, as a practical matter, 19 impair the interest held by the public interest group”); Bates, 904 F. Supp. at 1086 (“The interest of 20 . . . the official proponents of [the challenged] Proposition . . . in its continued validity could 21 obviously be impaired in this litigation”); Freeman, 625 F.2d at 887 (holding that an organization’s 22 protectable interest in a constitutional amendment supported by that organization “would as a 23 practical matter be significantly impaired by an adverse decision”); Sagebrush Rebellion, 713 F.2d 24 at 528 (holding that “there can be no serious dispute . . . concerning . . . the existence of a 25 protectable interest on the part of the [proposed intervenor] which may, as a practical matter, be 26 impaired”).

27 Here, Plaintiffs ask this Court to declare that Proposition 8 violates the United States

1 Constitution. They also seek to enjoin California state officials from enforcing that newly enacted 2 provision of the State Constitution. If the Court grants this relief, all Proposed Intervenors' labor in 3 support of Proposition 8 will be for naught. Thus, this Court's ruling could directly impair 4 Proposed Intervenors' interest in Proposition 8, by undoing all that they have done in obtaining its 5 enactment.

6 D. The Existing Parties Will Not Adequately Represent Proposed Intervenors'
7 Interests.

8 "[T]he requirement of inadequacy of representation is satisfied if the [proposed intervenor] 9 shows that representation of its interests 'may be' inadequate." Sagebrush Rebellion, 713 F.2d at 10 528 (emphasis added); accord Trbovich v. United Mine Workers of Am., 404 U.S. 528, 538 n.10
11 (1972). "[T]he burden of making this showing is minimal." Sagebrush Rebellion, 713 F.2d at 528; 12 accord Trbovich, 404 U.S. at 538 n.10; Bates, 904 F. Supp. at 1087.

13 Presumably, California Attorney General, Edmund G. Brown, will represent the California 14 state officials sued in this case. The Ninth Circuit has found that intervention is warranted where 15 the facts indicate that the defendant government official desires the same legal outcome sought by 16 the plaintiff. See Sagebrush Rebellion, 713 F.2d at 528. Attorney General Brown has made it clear 17 that he opposes Proposition 8's validity. In the challenge to Proposition 8 recently decided by the 18 California Supreme Court, Attorney General Brown argued that "Proposition 8 should be 19 invalidated . . . because it abrogates fundamental rights . . . without a compelling interest." See Ex.
20 K at p. 75. The Attorney General's deputy communicated this message more pointedly at oral 21 argument, when he identified himself as a "challenger" to Proposition 8. See California Supreme 22 Court Website, Proposition 8 Cases, available at http://www.courtinfo.ca.gov/courts/supreme/
23 highprofile/prop8.htm (last visited on May 27, 2009) (linking to audio and video coverage of the 24 oral argument). A self-identified "challenger" to Proposition 8 will not adequately represent the 25 interests of those who diligently labored for its enactment.

26 The Ninth Circuit has also found that a state attorney general inadequately represents the 27 views of initiative proponents if he interprets the initiative amendment differently than the 28

1 proponents. See Yniguez, 939 F.2d at 738. Attorney General Brown’s legal views about 2 Proposition 8 conflict sharply with those held by Proposed Intervenors. As previously mentioned, 3 the Attorney General believes that Proposition 8 should be invalidated, while Proposed Intervenors 4 firmly maintain its legal propriety. Additionally, Attorney General Brown contends that 5 Proposition 8 should be interpreted narrowly, i.e., that the State should recognize all relational 6 unions that were considered to be “marriages” when they were formalized (regardless of whether 7 they conform to Proposition 8’s structure of one man and one woman). See Ex. K at pp. 61-75 8 (arguing that the State should recognize same-sex “marriages” previously solemnized within its 9 borders). In contrast, Proposed Intervenors maintain that Proposition 8 should be interpreted 10 broadly, i.e., that it prevents the State from “recogniz[ing]” as “marriage” any relational union that 11 does not conform to Proposition 8’s structure of one man and one woman (regardless of when or 12 where it was solemnized). See Cal. Const. art. I, § 7.5. These significant distinctions between 13 Attorney General Brown’s and Proposed Intervenors’ legal views about Proposition 8 demonstrate 14 that he is unable to adequately represent Proposed Intervenors’ interests.

15 The inadequate-representation prong is also satisfied where the existing parties—because of 16 inability or unwillingness—might not present intervenor’s arguments. See Sagebrush Rebellion, 17 713 F.2d at 528; Blake v. Pallan, 554 F.2d 947, 954-55 (9th Cir. 1977). In 2000, Californians 18 enacted a statutory initiative that defined “marriage,” like Proposition 8 does, as a union between “a 19 man and a woman.” Cal. Fam. Code § 308.5 (2000). Attorney General Brown unsuccessfully 20 defended that statute against state constitutional attack. See In re Marriage Cases, 43 Cal.4th 757, 21 76 Cal.Rptr.3d 683 (Cal. 2008). When litigating that case, he presented only two state interests for 22 defining marriage as the union of a man and a woman: (1) the government’s interest in maintaining 23 its longstanding definition of marriage; and (2) its interest in affirming the will of its citizens. See 24 Answer Brief of State of California and the Attorney General to Opening Brief on the Merits, In re
25 Marriage Cases, No. S147999, at pp. 43-54 (attached as Exhibit M). Here, Proposed Intervenors 26 intend to argue additional state interests including but not limited to: promoting stability in 27 relationships between a man and a woman because they naturally (and at times unintentionally)

1 produce children; and promoting the statistically optimal child-rearing household where children 2 are raised by both a mother and a father. The Attorney General has proven unwilling to argue these 3 state interests, which have been found by other courts to satisfy rational-basis review. See, e.g., 4 Hernandez v. Robles, 7 N.Y.3d 338, 855 N.E.2d 1 (N.Y. 2006). His refusal to do so here will 5 unnecessarily hinder the constitutional defense of Proposition 8.

6 “[Another] way for the intervenor to show inadequate representation is to demonstrate that 7 its interests are sufficiently different in . . . degree from those of the named party.” B. Fernandez &
8 Hnos., Inc. v. Kellogg USA, Inc., 440 F.3d 541, 546 (1st Cir. 2006); see also Glancy v. Taubman
9 Ctrs., Inc., 373 F.3d 656, 675 (6th Cir. 2004) (“Asymmetry in the intensity . . . of interest can 10 prevent a named party from representing the interests of the absentee”). The Ninth Circuit has 11 acknowledged that oftentimes the government’s motivation to defend a voter-enacted initiative is 12 much less than the proponent’s hearty enthusiasm:

13 [A]s appears to be true in this case, the government may be less than enthusiastic 14 about the enforcement of a measure adopted by ballot initiative; for better or worse, 15 the people generally resort to a ballot initiative precisely because they do not believe 16 that the ordinary processes of representative government are sufficiently sensitive to 17 the popular will with respect to a particular subject. While the people may not 18 always be able to count on their elected representatives to support fully and fairly a 19 provision enacted by ballot initiative, they can invariably depend on its sponsors to 20 do so.

21 Yniguez, 939 F.2d at 733. This Court has similarly reasoned:

22 [A]n official sponsor of a ballot initiative may be considered to add an element not 23 covered by the government in defending the validity of the initiative in that the very 24 act of resorting to a ballot initiative indicates a rift between the initiative’s 25 proponents and voters and their elected officials on the issue that underlies the 26 initiative.

27 Bates, 904 F. Supp. at 1087 (citations omitted).

28 The marriage issue in California reflects this sharp “rift” between the people and their elected representatives. As previously mentioned, in 2000, Californians enacted a statutory initiative that defined “marriage” as a union between “a man and a woman.” Cal. Fam. Code § 308.5 (2000). In 2005 and 2007, however, the California Legislature sought to overturn the

1 people's will by approving bills that would have allowed marriage between persons of the same 2 sex, but on both occasions, the Governor vetoed those bills. See A.B. 849, 2005-2006 Leg., Reg.
3 Sess. (Cal. 2005); A.B. 43, 2007-2008 Leg., Reg. Sess. (Cal. 2007). These repeated legislative 4 efforts to permit same-sex "marriage" demonstrate the representatives' hostility to the people's will 5 on marriage. This prompted Proposed Intervenors to endure the personally arduous initiative
6 process to enact the constitutional amendment desired by the people. Moreover, the Attorney 7 General's legal opposition to Proposition 8 also demonstrates the rift between Californians and their 8 elected representatives. Californians thus depend on Proposed Intervenors, and not their elected 9 officials, to defend Proposition 8 vigorously.

10 In sum, Proposed Intervenors satisfy all the requirements for intervention as of right. This 11 Court should grant their request to intervene.

12 II. PROPOSED INTERVENORS HAVE SATISFIED THE REQUIREMENTS FOR PERMISSIVE
13 INTERVENTION.

14 Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(b)(1)(B) establishes the requirements for permissive intervention. "[A] 15 court may grant permissive intervention where the applicant for intervention shows (1) independent 16 grounds for jurisdiction; (2) the motion is timely; and (3) the applicant's claim or defense, and the 17 main action, have a question of law or question of fact in common." City of Los Angeles, 288 F.3d 18 at 403. Proposed Intervenors satisfy each of these requirements.

19 First, Proposed Intervenors have independent grounds for jurisdiction in this case.
20 Plaintiffs' claims seek to undermine Proposed Intervenors' state constitutional and statutory rights 21 as the official proponents and campaign committee for Proposition 8. This direct attack on 22 Proposed Intervenors' rights creates sufficient grounds for jurisdiction.

23 Second, Proposed Intervenors have timely filed their motion to intervene. In determining 24 timeliness for purposes of permissive intervention, the Ninth Circuit "considers precisely the same 25 three factors—the stage of the proceedings, the prejudice to existing parties, and the length of and 26 reason for the delay"—that it considers when determining timeliness for purposes of mandatory 27 intervention. League of United Latin Am. Citizens v. Wilson, 131 F.3d 1297, 1308 (9th Cir. 1997).

1 As previously demonstrated, Proposed Intervenors satisfy the timeliness requirement: they filed 2 their motion at the very earliest stages of this proceeding; they have not delayed in moving to 3 intervene; and the parties will not be prejudiced in any way.

4 Third, Proposed Intervenors' defenses to Plaintiffs' claims present questions of law in 5 common with the issues involved in the "main action." Plaintiffs' claims and Proposed 6 Intervenors' defenses both involve the constitutionality of Proposition 8 under the Federal 7 Constitution: Plaintiffs seek a declaration that Proposition 8 violates the Federal Constitution, and 8 Proposed Intervenors contend that Proposition 8 complies with the Federal Constitution. These 9 arguments present inextricably intertwined and completely overlapping questions of law.

10 In sum, Proposed Intervenors satisfy all the requirements for permissive intervention. This 11 Court should therefore grant their request to intervene.

1 CONCLUSION

2 Proposed Intervenors have significantly protectable interests in Proposition 8. The 3 California Attorney General will not adequately represent their interests because he has argued that 4 Proposition 8 should be invalidated; he interprets Proposition 8 differently than Proposed 5 Intervenors; and he will not present all their arguments. This Court should thus allow Proposed 6 Intervenors to intervene in this action.
